

Project Play!

February 2009 - issue 5

This fitness equipment is designed to complement its surroundings and offers a complete physical workout.

It's never been more important than now to combat the sedentary lifestyle that so many of us lead.

The new Norwell fitness range from Moduplay is a way of getting the fitness routine into the lives of so many more and plays a vital part in providing opportunities for beneficial exercise routines.

The Danish design and clever engineering for low maintenance is attracting a lot of attention.

Conceived to blend with its environment rather than stand out, it is a refreshing change of approach to outdoor fitness gear design.

Aesthetically pleasing curves and muted natural colours fit in perfectly with any setting.

The 14 individual outdoor fitness stations can be used by all age groups.

Project Play!

February 2009 - issue 5

Design of new Cableway evokes an archers bow..

The Cableway has been trialled at Brickpit Park, Hornsby for nearly 2 years.

Recent installations include Chandlers Park, Griffith and it looks set to quickly gain popularity with many more projects in the pipeline.

A second option is available that is lower and does not include the platform.

Loads of fun for lots of kids at once on Big Bumper See-saw

Good old-fashioned see-saw fun. Over 4.8m long and balanced with a weight offset spring mechanism in the central pivot.

This means if one end of the see-saw is suddenly vacated the child remaining on the other end is let down slowly instead of being dropped!
